CTCS 191: INTRODUCTION TO TV AND VIDEO

What and where is television today? Will digital streaming replace cable TV? Has the quality of television outpaced feature films? To discuss these questions, this course introduces students to the study of television as a dramatic form that both overlaps and diverges from other media. In this course, we use the prism of contemporary television to focus on media history, theory, and criticism.

Our goal is to understand television as a technology, textual form, and industrial practice.

OPEN TO NON-MAJORS

PROFESSOR NITIN GOVIL

LOCATION: NORRIS

TIME: WEDNESDAY 2 - 4:50 PM