ENGL 352g: BOOKPACKING

Exploring US regional cultures through contemporary novels

Spring 2018     MWF@10-11     THH203
Instructor: Andrew Chater    chater@usc.edu
(Office hours on campus to be confirmed; Skype by arrangement)

OVERVIEW

This class is an exercise in “bookpacking,” an innovative form of literary adventure in which novels serve as portals through which to explore American regional history and culture.

Over the course of a semester, we’ll take a metaphorical journey through the key regions of the USA - from the Appalachia to the Hispanic South West, and beyond - and we’ll use one contemporary novel per region to ’unpack’ each region’s culture, past and present.

The course promises a vibrant overview of the myriad facets of the American experience, whilst offering an important exercise in cultural empathy and understanding - all the more vital in this age of profound division.

Offered for both English and GE, the course offers a holistic approach to the humanities, combining elements of literature, history, geography, politics and social studies. If you’re interested in a course that celebrates literature with a ‘real world’ application, this course is for you.

The course is led by Andrew Chater, award-winning BBC TV historian and presenter, who is developing the ‘bookpacking’ concept with USC Dornsife as a TV series for PBS.

Please visit www.bookpackers.com for more information on the concept behind the class, and www.andrewchater.com for more information on the class instructor.

PLEASE NOTE

Andrew teaches two ‘Bookpacking’ courses at USC. Both have the ident 352g.

- The first is a 15-week ‘on campus’ MWF course starting January 2018.
- The second is a ‘Maymester’ class held on location in New Orleans in the weeks following commencement (May 12 to June 6, 2018).

This document describes the first of these two options - please don’t get the two confused!
REQUIRED READING

1 - Novels
- Raymond Chandler - The Big Sleep
- Elizabeth Strout - Olive Kitteridge
- James Dickey - Deliverance
- Toni Morrison - Song of Solomon
- Truman Capote - Other Voices, Other Rooms
- Willa Cather - My Ántonia
- Leslie Marmon Silko - Ceremony
- Gish Jen - Typical American

2 - Short Story Collections
- Sandra Cisneros - Woman Hollering Creek
- E. Annie Proulx - Close Range

SECONDARY READING

A course like this is as rich as you want to make it. If you are a voracious reader, you may wish to devour more books than the minimum outlined above.

I shall touch on dozens of wonderful novels as we proceed through the course. Many of these are listed in the syllabus breakdown that follows.

Week by week, I’ll upload extracts from some of these novels to Blackboard. You’re not expected to read these in advance - we’ll dig into them, in class, together - but they’ll remain on Blackboard for the remainder of the course and you can explore them and quote from them as you see fit when you come to write your papers.

I hope these extracts inspire you to revisit these texts at full length at some point in the future. This course offers a journey through America’s literary landscape, and such journeys can last a lifetime.

ASSIGNMENTS / ASSESSMENT

You will be graded on participation, three papers, and a Final Course Project involving original research, as follows:

- Participation: 10%
- Papers (20% x 3) = 60%
- Final Course Project: 20%
- Final Course Project Presentations: 10%

Participation is defined as:
- attendance at all sessions
- reading fully the required texts
- thoughtful contribution to class discussion
- active participation in the Final Course Project Q&As

There will be an attendance roster to sign at every class. More than three absences over the term will negatively impact your overall grade. Five unexcused absences will result in a failure for the course regardless of your performance in the papers and the Final Course Project.

Audio recordings of each session will be available on request if you have a legitimate reason for missing a class.

Three papers are due over the course of the semester.

Each paper will ask students to discuss the themes of that section of the course, with reference to the assigned novels and class discussions.

Each paper should be 5 or 6 pages long, double spaced, and proof-read for clarity, substance, and style.

All papers should be handed to me in hard copy in class on the due date. You are also required to submit a copy through Turnitin on Blackboard. Schedule for papers, as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<td>Paper 2</td>
<td>Feb 28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Paper 3</td>
<td>Apr 8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Paper 4</td>
<td>Apr 16</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Papers will be graded on a point scale from 0-100. Any paper delivered late will be penalized by 3 points a day, up to a maximum of 7 days, after which the paper will be judged uncompleted. (Uncompleted assignments receive a zero).
Final Course Project

In the session on Feb 7, I will outline complete details of the Final Course Project. The project will involve you researching an American subculture of your choice, through a ‘bookpackers’ perspective.

I will offer a variety of examples of American subcultures, each of them connected to a specific group of people in a specific regional location. For each, I will offer examples of novels or texts that might be use to explore that facet of the American experience. You can choose to research one of the examples I offer; or you might be inspired to come up with an idea of your own, based on a book or place you know well, or a book / place / culture that intrigues you.

‘Research’ can be physical, or virtual. Physical research would involve choosing a subculture that you can access, in person - either here in LA, or during Spring Break. Virtual research would involve a traditional process of exploration through online and secondary sources, and through the pages of fiction.

This is a ‘summative’ project, in that it will involve you incorporating new skills learnt over the course of the class. You will be expected to think, and work, in a cross-humanities way, as befitting the ‘bookpackers’ idea - weaving together place, people, and text, and forging connections between past and present, making sense of complex cultural phenomena through this cross-disciplinary lens.

The project will be delivered as a combination of prose (2500 words minimum) and other media - images, audio, film clips etc - uploaded to special portal on the bookpackers.com site. All details of format and technical practicalities will be given on Feb 7.

Different elements of the project will be due over the course of February, March and April, according to a formal schedule I will distribute on Feb 7.

Uploaded online elements will be ‘locked’ on April 18, after which no changes will be made.

In the final four sessions of the course, you will share your findings with your classmates, highlighting key elements of your original research, and fielding questions. Again, I will describe this process more fully at the session on Feb 7.
COURSE OBJECTIVES

“\textit{You never really understand a person \ldots until you climb into his skin and walk around in it.}” \\
- Atticus Finch in ‘To Kill a Mockingbird’

The challenge is empathy - understanding the mystery of other people. Fiction offers a solution. The fictional landscape is full of people who behave and think differently to us. Spending time in the company of these fictional characters, we come to understand what has made them how they are. We may never come to sympathize with them; but we can, at least, empathize. We can understand. Empathy in America today is in short supply. The nation is culturally divided. This course aims to help us bridge that gulf of misunderstanding.

It does so in a way that is cross-disciplinary, combining elements of literature, history, geography, politics and social studies. It encourages holistic study - a pure humanities experience, pushing us to think in surprising ways.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

1 – Critical and creative. Students will learn:
- to understand in depth the complex relations between a culture and its representations
- to grasp the skills and theories of interpretation and to see how interpretive interests shift with time and place
- to study a range of contrasting narratives from the perspective of several disciplines
- to engage in self-directed research
- to exercise their own skills in writing, generating new ideas by controlling and shaping language

2 – Philosophical and empathetic. Students will learn:
- to study behaviors of complex characters leading uncertain lives with competing values, weighing human costs and human benefits
- to test attitudes and understandings that are beyond their own immediate experience
- to engage with complex literatures as a preparation for understanding complex lives

3 – General Education (Humanistic Inquiry). Students will:
- cultivate a critical appreciation for various forms of human expression, including literature, language, philosophy, and the arts, as well as develop an understanding of the contexts from which these forms emerge;
- read and interpret actively and analytically, think critically and creatively, and write and speak persuasively;
- evaluate ideas from multiple perspectives and to formulate informed opinions on complex issues of critical importance in today’s global world.
STATEMENT ON ACADEMIC CONDUCT AND SUPPORT SYSTEMS

In this class you are invited to take notes in your book and in a notebook. Please do not use an electronic device (computer, phone, iPad, etc.) to take notes, unless you have a documented disability that requires it (in which case, please provide me with this notification).

Academic Conduct

Plagiarism - presenting someone else’s ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words - is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Section 11, Behavior Violating University Standards https://scampus.usc.edu/1100-behavior-violating-university-standards-and-appropriate-sanctions. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct, http://policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct.

Discrimination, sexual assault, and harassment are not tolerated by the university. You are encouraged to report any incidents to the Office of Equity and Diversity http://equity.usc.edu/ or to the Department of Public Safety http://capsnet.usc.edu/department/department-public-safety/online-forms/contact-us. This is important for the safety whole USC community. Another member of the university community - such as a friend, classmate, advisor, or faculty member - can help initiate the report, or can initiate the report on behalf of another person. The Center for Women and Men http://www.usc.edu/student-affairs/cwm provides 24/7 confidential support, and the sexual assault resource center webpage http://sarc.usc.edu/ describes reporting options and other resources.

Support Systems

A number of USC’s schools provide support for students who need help with scholarly writing. Check with your advisor or program staff to find out more. Students whose primary language is not English should check with the American Language Institute http://dornsife.usc.edu/ali, which sponsors courses and workshops specifically for international graduate students. The Office of Disability Services and Programs http://sait.usc.edu/academicsupport/centerprograms/dsp/home_index.html provides certification for students with disabilities and helps arrange the relevant accommodations. If an officially declared emergency makes travel to campus infeasible, USC Emergency Information http://emergency.usc.edu will provide safety and other updates, including ways in which instruction will be continued by means of blackboard, teleconferencing, and other technology.

Adjustments to this Syllabus may be made during the course of the semester.
