Course Description
How a story gets told is as important as what gets told, and the practice of close reading teaches us to pay attention not just to a story’s content and themes but also to its form. From literature we learn how metaphors contribute to complexity, how repetitions compete with silences, and how point of view and tone shape our reading expectations. From medicine we learn to appreciate what’s at stake in telling and listening to stories, our responsibility to a given text, and the real-world social and political ramifications of the work we do in the humanities. The field of Narrative Medicine draws these disciplinary objectives together, demonstrating that the narrative competence and creativity expected of humanities students and artists is correlative with being an effective and humane healer, and exploring the oldest humanistic questions about the mind and the body.

In Narrative Medicine we will examine clinical case studies, fiction (novels, films, short stories), and memoirs of health, for a deeper understanding of the relationship between narrative and identity, self and other, literature and medicine. Each week we will coordinate a specific literary term or genre with a related medical concept or controversy:
• our focus on plot will challenge the ways that diagnostic certainty, treatment, and cure can shape our narrative expectations;
• our understanding of literary narrators and character development will inform our view of the power dynamics of the doctor-patient relationship;
• our emphasis on time and metaphor will teach us about the role that memory and imagination can play in defining and sustaining a meaningful life.

The interplay between literary studies and life studies provides us with tools for better understanding ourselves and our place in the world.

Learning Objectives – In this course you will:
• Gain an appreciation for the relations between representation and the human soul, for the relations between words and ideas, and for the social utility of a sophisticated understanding of discourse;
• Reflect on what it means to be human through close study of human experience across the centuries and across the diverse cultures of the English speaking world;
• Cultivate a critical appreciation for various forms of human expression, from literary expression to science writing, and develop an understanding of the contexts from which these forms emerge;
• Engage with lasting ideas and values that have animated humanity throughout the centuries for a more purposeful, more ethical, and intellectually richer life;
• Learn to read and interpret actively and analytically, to think critically and creatively, and to write and speak persuasively;
• Learn to evaluate ideas from multiple perspectives and to formulate informed opinions on complex issues of critical importance in today's global world;
• Learn to collaborate effectively through seminar discussions, class presentations, and modern modes of sharing knowledge.

Course Requirements
1. Participation. Active participation in discussions is essential, and you cannot participate if you are absent. Arrive on time with all the relevant course materials (i.e. readings and assignments for that meeting), ask questions, express opinions, and respond to the comments of your classmates with respect and curiosity. More than 3 unexcused absences will result in the loss of 50 points per missed class beyond three classes. After six unexcused absences, you will lose all 150 points.
2. Weekly Reader Responses. Your ten short responses (1-2 pages) are designed to help you organize your thoughts and engage more deeply with the work. You will respond to a question or prompt that I will hand out and post on Blackboard. These prompts will invite you to make connections between the week's text/concept and a current event, literary theory, another class, or your personal experiences. Prompts will begin Week 2 and end Week 15 (identified as RR# on the schedule below).
3. Close Reading Essay. Beginning Week 4, students will work in pairs to lead the class close reading of the core concept and text identified for the session. After your presentation, you will each write your own essay based on your presentation. You will have one week after your presentation to turn in a 5-7 page close-reading essay. Do not use any outside sources. You must meet with me before your presentation. See Blackboard for more detailed instructions.

4. Final Project. This project will consist of two parts, one critical close reading and the other creative. These two parts will expand upon one or more of the concepts raised in class. See Blackboard for more detailed instructions.

Course Schedule

Adjustments may be made during the semester. Except for Day 1, all readings and assignments must be completed before we begin class on the day they are listed in the syllabus.

Statement on Academic Conduct and Support Systems

Academic Conduct
Plagiarism – presenting someone else’s ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words – is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Section 11, Behavior Violating University Standards https://scampus.usc.edu/1100-behavior-violating-university-standards-and-appropriate-sanctions/. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct, http://policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct/.

Discrimination, sexual assault, and harassment are not tolerated by the university. You are encouraged to report any incidents to the Office of Equity and Diversity http://equity.usc.edu/ or to the Department of Public Safety http://capsnet.usc.edu/department/department-public-safety/online-forms/contact-us. This is important for the safety whole USC community. Another member of the university community – such as a friend, classmate, advisor, or faculty member – can help initiate the report, or can initiate the report on behalf of another person. The Center for Women and Men http://www.usc.edu/student-affairs/cwm/ provides 24/7 confidential support, and the sexual assault resource center webpage sarc@usc.edu describes reporting options and other resources.

Support Systems
A number of USC’s schools provide support for students who need help with scholarly writing. Check with your advisor or program staff to find out more. Students whose primary language is not English should check with the American Language Institute http://dornsife.usc.edu/ali, which sponsors courses and workshops specifically for international graduate students. The Office of Disability Services and Programs http://sait.usc.edu/academicsupport/centerprograms/dsp/home_index.html provides certification for students with disabilities and helps arrange the relevant accommodations. If an officially declared emergency makes travel to campus infeasible, USC Emergency Information http://emergency.usc.edu/ will provide safety and other updates, including ways in which instruction will be continued by means of blackboard, teleconferencing, and other technology.

Student Behavior
Behavior that persistently or grossly interferes with classroom activities is considered disruptive behavior and may be subject to disciplinary action. Such behavior inhibits other students’ ability to learn and an instructor’s ability to teach. A student responsible for disruptive behavior may be required to leave class pending discussion and resolution of the problem and may be reported to the Office of Student Judicial Affairs for disciplinary action. These strictures may extend to behaviors outside the classroom that are related to the course.
Emergency Preparedness/Course Continuity in a Crisis
In case of a declared emergency if travel to campus is not feasible, USC executive leadership will announce an electronic way for instructors to teach students in their residence halls or homes using a combination of Blackboard, teleconferencing, and other technologies.
