

SPRING 2016

Tues/Thur

12:30-1:50pm

Location:

THH 116

Class no.

10347R

4 units

Plus one discussion:

W 10-1:50pm

W 2:30-4:30pm

This course satisfies
the diversity requirement and fulfills the core requirement for the ASE majors/minors.

Under the new GE requirement, this course fulfills GE-C, Social Analysis.

Professor
Chrisshonna Nieva

AMST 200gm

Introduction to American Studies and Ethnicity

This course offers an interdisciplinary introduction to American and Ethnic Studies. A principal goal is to help students understand how people in the United States live in and think about their country as well as how the world views them. The central themes and topics addressed will include identity formation, immigration, imprisonment, militarism, cultural production, religion, sexuality, and political change. This course will encourage students to formulate connections between these issues by placing them in their broad historical and cultural contexts. We will consider a variety of types of evidence such as novels, photographs, films, the built environment, and material culture to show that we can and need to analyze everything in the world around us.

USC
Dornsife
Department of American Studies and Ethnicity