

Italian 320
Spring 2016
Taught in Italian
Prerequisite: ITAL 224

University of Southern California
Dr. Francesca Leardini
E-mail: Leardini@usc.edu
Office: THH 343A

Love in Italian Literature

G. De Chirico, Ettore e Andromaca (1917)

Course Description

In this course we will consider love as the guiding theme to explore the development of Italian literature from the Middle Ages to modern times. We will read and discuss prose and poetry masterpieces by writers who may include, among others, Dante, Cavalcanti, Boccaccio, Petrarca, Leopardi, Verga, Marinetti, Calvino, Maraini and Landolfi. Through the analysis of the theme and language of love, students will further develop their observation, interpretation and expression skills in Italian. They will discuss in detail the content and ideas of the text, engaging in a clear critical argument on the subjects studied. By focusing on the historical, social and political environments surrounding the texts we read, students will better understand Italian life and society.