I. COURSE PREREQUISITES

None

II. CATALOGUE DESCRIPTION

This doctoral course will develop a range of skills in leading public discourse for the purposes of increasing civic engagement and public participation, building broad based public support, and enabling competencies such as the following:

1. Utilizing knowledge to generate change for the benefit of vulnerable and at-risk populations and the Social Work profession;
2. facilitating social connectivity;
3. constructing and defining critical perspectives;
4. ensuring transparency and accountability; and
5. strengthening civic agency.

A necessary focus of the course is to effectively navigate and understand social media, how to build social media marketing strategies to communicate, and how to track their effectiveness (message management).

Discourse is written or spoken communication or debate. Public Discourse, for the purposes of this doctoral course, is defined as using all forms of media, social, written, and oral, with professional presentational skills to communicate thought and influence others at personal, organizational, governmental, and societal levels. Doctoral students are expected to become thought leaders in their selected Grand Challenge(s).
III. COURSE DESCRIPTION

This doctoral course creates a learning environment for each candidate to utilize three organizing principles in leading public discourse: Discovery, Communication, and Action. Leading Public Discourse combines analyses of civil society and the role of media in transformational change. The course will examine the utilization of contemporary and historical sources, the current state and future directions for social work, the public media, and the information needs of communities, organizations, and American society. Professional social work must communicate core expertise and empirically informed interventions vital for informed citizenship to sustain and create a dynamic and responsive democratic culture. Across the trajectory of the course, a range of other institutions and practices that have similarly contributed to an informed democracy will be analyzed.

This doctoral course examines leading public discourse as it relates to: culture & media; social networking & social capital; measuring, monitoring, & analyzing social media trends & impacts; social media & the government; race, class & the digital divide; economics & ownership; privacy; law & ethics; identity & reputation; and, historical antecedents, theoretical (focusing on how different speakers and writers have conceived of civic engagement, public participation, political economy, and social capital), technological (understanding how the affordances and uses of different kinds of media enabled achievement of goals), and applied (seeking future models for how professional social workers, citizens, policy makers, and journalists might collaborate to better meet the informational and cultural needs of our times). Also explored is how new media practices may be altering our conception of democracy, government, citizenship, and community; seeking to better grasp what remains the same and what changes are required as we interact with each other via virtual worlds and social networks rather than in physical coffee houses, town halls, and other public meeting places. Employing the Grand Challenges for Social Work, students will design strategies and publicly present their ideas to lead public discourse through the themes of effective change strategies and influencing public perception.

IV. COURSE OBJECTIVES

This Leading Public in Social Work doctoral course, through discovery, communication, and action, will:

V. COURSE FORMAT / INSTRUCTIONAL METHODS

This doctoral course will employ lectures, interactive discussions, experiential exercises, videos, presentations, public speaking, and guest lectures from experts across a wide variety of leadership positions. Individual and group in-class activities will be employed to provide application of content, theories, and concepts.

The course will be taught from the perspective that doctoral students will be engaged throughout their professional lives in leading public discourse to influence social and organizational contexts; whether as internal employees, managers, directors, or as external advocates, or consultants. This practical orientation drives the structure of the course which will involve experiencing and participating in activities that provide insights, knowledge, and practical skills about the nature of public discourse and leadership in society, organizations, and social service contexts. Appearances of guest experts, lectures, discussions, and activities are intended to exceed boundaries of conventional wisdom. The intent is to extend, provide insight, employ actual examples, and generate innovative ideas from guest experts and students’ experiences.

Each of the major assignments is described below:

Note: Written assignments will be evaluated on the quality of the ideas presented & the ability to use and cite pertinent literature correctly using the appropriate writing style for the media source. Written assignments must be clear and concise, well organized, and reflect an integrated understanding of the reading assignments, lectures, outside sources of literature, and relevant experiences and information. Doctoral students should consult publications of current research & theory to support ideas.
Assignment One:
Grand Challenge Selection Paper & Presentation (15%)
 a. Writing Component (10%)
 b. Presentation Component (5%)

Learning objective: To inspire doctoral students to develop superlative active, engaged, and effective forms of communication.

In assignment one, the doctoral student will select one or two Grand Challenges and write a paper justifying the selection(s) to include any other formative information. This paper will include why the selections(s) was/were made, where the student sees their leadership position taking shape, and a brief commentary about the current state of the Grand Challenge(s) to include: the political posture, leaders, followers, stakeholders, adversaries, the most current statistical evidence, and the students intended role (at least five current sources supporting the paper are required-current within the past three years). This paper will be a minimum of five pages (no maximum). The doctoral student will also briefly present (30 seconds) their choices during the third class and upload a 30 second taped presentation onto the LMS about their why. Due: Week Three

Presentation Component:
Video Companion: The Kinetic Communicator and the Modern Social Worker
(DSW version) (located on asynchronous) (Immediately following this asynchronous presentation you will be prompted to upload your video)

This video provides an introduction to the concept of ethos (how you are being perceived by your audience) & articulating your personal “WHY”. The video will challenge doctoral students to develop a heightened awareness of default or habituated patterns that will lead to make more effective choices in HOW they communicate to specific audiences. The video introduces the principles of Kinetic Communication™ and Solutions-based Journalism to enhance doctoral students’ abilities to become highly effective communicators within the social work profession & the society at large. Utilizing active and engaged language, doctoral students will upload a 30 second video that clearly articulates the WHY behind their chosen Grand Challenge.

Learning Objective: To develop an awareness of default in order to strengthen the doctoral student’s Ethos; and to enhance their verbal ability to clearly and concisely articulate a personal and professional connection to the reasoning behind their chosen Grand Challenge. This ability to communicate their ‘WHY’ serves to fuel their journey to achieve what they are setting out to accomplish.

Assignment Two:
Grand Challenge Assignment: Leading & influencing your Grand Challenge  (25%)
In assignment two, the doctoral student will build upon assignment one and further research the selected Grand Challenge(s) and write either a scholarly paper, Op-ED, or News Analysis about the current state of the selected Grand Challenge(s) including leadership & followership.

For this assignment, doctoral students will have a choice:

First, the student can opt to write a scholarly paper, minimum of 10 pages with a minimum of 20 current sources (within the past three years) (no maximum). The paper must include a brief literature review and provide historical and current data, testimony, and public rhetoric about the selected Grand Challenge(s). An array of inputs from various sources including peer reviewed scholarly journals, trade journals, and popular magazines (The New Yorker, The Economist, Harvard Business Review, etc.) should inform this paper.

Second, for those doctoral students interested in making this a document for mass consumption they can attempt to write in one of two journalistic styles: Op-Ed or news analysis. Each will come with its own set of requirements, as follows:

- Op-ED: Not only will students write a 600 word Op-Ed, but they will include a five page paper elaborating on the themes explored therein. In addition they will include a bibliography with a minimum of 20 current sources (within the past three years).

- News Analysis: Not only will students write a 1,600 word News Analysis, but will also include a bibliography with a minimum of 20 current sources (within the past three years).

This paper can be written as a journalistic story written for a magazine, newspaper, trade journal, or other type of journal/periodical. Due: Week Six

a. Writing Component: (20%)
The writing component of the Communications Lab for this assignment will provide doctoral students with video descriptions (embedded in the asynchronous) of writing style, structure, and news gathering techniques that could be applied to news style publications like those listed above. The intent is to show how reporting is an invaluable tool of any academic inquiry, whether writing for a newspaper or formulating research questions.

b. Presentation Component:
VIDEO COMPANION: Precision Messaging Process™
This video will guide doctoral students step-by-step through a process to laser-focus messaging. The doctoral student will be challenged to formulate an Overall Objective (one to two sentences) that describes what they are fighting to accomplish in tackling this Grand Challenge. The objective will be phrased in ACTIVE terminology and in a way that reflects each individual doctoral student’s VOICE; it will serve as a guiding principle that focuses each student’s ability to clearly and concisely VERBALLY articulate the personal & professional investment they are making in tackling their chosen Grand Challenge.

Challenge: Upload Video (two minutes) (5%)
“From the page to the stage.” Utilizing the Precision Messaging Process™, the students will actualize their written treatise into a two minute “highlight reel” oral presentation that articulates and defines a path forward for tackling their chosen Grand Challenge. Note: View the asynchronous before writing you paper.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE:
To utilize an organizing structure (PMP™) that enhances the students’ ability to articulate BROAD VISION WITH SPECIFIC INTENTION™

Assignment Three:
Proposal for TED-like talk based on Grand Challenge (15%)

In assignment three the doctoral student will write a proposal that will include an outline and narrative (including thee four points noted below) of what will be presented and in the format it will be presented. Relevant information garnered from the previous papers can be included. TED requires this outline of all potential speakers. The paper will be a minimum of three pages (no maximum). Due: Week Eight

a. Writing Component (15%):
Begin by joining TED and follow their directions. Doctoral students will be given real life examples of good, bad, & ugly TED pitches (*see unit three) and will view video’s relative to TED on how applicants conceive of and articulate their ideas for a TED talk, ahead of ever actually delivering it. After viewing these videos, the doctoral student will write their TED-like Talk proposal. There is no video upload for this assignment.
Include:
1) a compelling opening sentence;
2) a two paragraph description of what the proposed talk is about;
3) a descriptive narrative with bullet points;
4) a compelling conclusion with an ask.

b. VIDEO COMPANION: Your Moment to Inspire: WHY Ted Talks work
These short videos located on the asynchronous will focus on the discourse framework of a TED TALK as a potential vehicle to deliver your vision for tackling your chosen Grand Challenge. Highlighting the special considerations that make a Ted Talk unique and why choosing a Ted Talk could serve as an effective platform in delivering your vision to an audience. This video will lay out a template for a Ted Talk and focus on WHY this template is effective. Refer to the Ted Talk links that exemplify elements of a successful presentation (*see unit three).

LEARNING OBJECTIVE:
To guide doctoral students to understand WHY Ted Talks are effective, and to provide a template on which students can craft future TED-like TALKS. TED stands for Technology, Entertainment, and Design: three ideas that shape our world according to the nonprofit Sapling Foundation, owner of TED. TED is a series of conferences in select cities around the world that feature 18+ minute lectures on a broad range of subjects. The TED Talk slogan is “ideas worth spreading”. It currently has an online data base of more than 2000 talks, free for public viewing (some with views in the tens of millions).
Assignment Four:
TED-like TALK rehearsal to classmates (15%)

Live and recorded: Doctoral students will present a portion (five minutes) of their TED-like talk live to the class (10%). This talk will be also be prerecorded and uploaded on the LMS (week nine). This assignment provides the doctoral student with the opportunity to refine speaking and presenting skills. *Dates will be selected by doctoral students. Due: Weeks Nine-13

a. Presentation Component: (5%)
PRESENTATION CHALLENGE: VIDEO UPLOAD
The doctoral student will be required to upload their recorded five minute TED-like TALK to the LMS. This uploaded Talk will provide opportunity for faculty and peer feedback.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE:
To develop and hone strong openings that will provide the foundations on which the students can craft their most effective presentations.

Assignment Five:
Ted-Like Talk on Grand Challenge (10%)
Circumstances may be that the doctoral student will not be selected for a TED talk or may not be selected to present in the time frame of this course. Doctoral students must produce evidence that an application was made to TED. Doctoral students will upload their full Grand Challenge(s) presentation onto the LMS and encouraged to upload to YouTube. Due: Week Fifteen (15)

Assignment Six:
Final Paper: Lessons learned (15%)
This final “Lessons Learned” paper will outline and provide an overview of the doctoral students learning gained throughout the course about the selected Grand Challenge(s), leadership, & public discourse and how these may be applied in the future. The paper must be a minimum of five pages (no maximum) with five citations. Due: (One week past the final class)

Class Participation: There are no points awarded for participating as doctoral students are expected to be present for every class and contribute to the development of a positive learning environment and to demonstrate their learning through written and oral assignments and through active class participation. Class participation consists of meaningful, thoughtful, and respectful participation based on completed required & independent readings & assignments prior to class. When in class, doctoral students demonstrate understanding of the material & are prepared to offer comments or reflections about the material, or alternatively, to have a set of thoughtful questions about the material. Placing camera on hold for longer than a few minutes is not considered participation. Doctoral students are expected to participate and complete in-class exercises. Exercises are used to stimulate discussion, encourage critical thinking, and reinforce social work values. Doctoral student’s participation in the weekly asynchronous exercises is monitored. Although no points are awarded, failure to participate can lead to a reduction in grade.

Grades will be based on the following:
USC School of Social Work Grading Standards

Within the School of Social Work, grades are determined in each class based on the following standards which have been established by the faculty of the School:

1) Grades of A or A- are reserved for student work which not only demonstrates very good mastery of content but which also shows that the student has undertaken a complex task, has applied critical thinking skills to the assignment, and/or has demonstrated creativity in her or his approach to the assignment. The difference between these two grades would be determined by the degree to which these skills have demonstrated by the student.

(2) A grade of B+ will be given to work which is judged to be very good. This grade denotes the student has demonstrated a more-than-competent understanding of the material being tested in the assignment.

(3) A grade of B will be given to student work which meets the basic requirements of the assignment. It denotes that the student has done adequate work on the assignment and meets basic course expectations.

(4) A grade of B- will denote that a student's performance was less than adequate on an assignment, reflecting only moderate grasp of content and/or expectations.

(5) A grade of C would reflect a minimal grasp of the assignments, poor organization of ideas and/or several significant areas requiring improvement.

(6) Grades between C- to F will be applied to denote a failure to meet minimum standards, reflecting serious deficiencies in all aspects of a student's performance on the assignment.

Most of the current literature about Public Discourse is found in keywords: Public Deliberation or Discourse. Public Deliberation is an approach to politics in which citizens, not just experts or politicians are deeply involved in community problem solving and public decision making. Working with trained facilitators who utilize a variety of deliberative techniques, citizens come together and consider relevant facts and values from multiple points of view; listen to one another in order to think critically about the various options before them and consider the underlying tensions and tough choices inherent to most public issues; and ultimately seek to come to some conclusion for action in the form of a reasoned public judgment.

Not politics as usual. Too often, in our political system bad communication is seemingly rewarded. Despite any good intentions, politicians and candidates often rely on arguments or attacks that simplify issues and exaggerate differences. Campaigns frame tough questions as if there are obvious choices (high taxes v. low taxes or good roads vs. bad roads), rather than the tough choices and value dilemmas inherent to public policy decisions (high taxes and good roads v. low taxes and bad roads). For democracy to thrive, decision-makers need to confront the complexity of issues and attempt to balance competing values, not distract from them. Such considerations are at the heart of deliberation.

The practice of good public deliberation/discourse is the cornerstone of democratic and community politics. Public Deliberation connects people, even those with conflicting interests, in a way that allows them to make decisions and act in regard to problems or challenging circumstances. Public Deliberation can also reveal new possibilities for action that individuals alone did not see before.

Deliberative democracy is also of particular interest to communication scholars. Indeed, the art of public deliberation in many ways represents the traditional heart of a rhetorical education spanning back to the classical Greek and Roman societies. Far removed from the manipulative “non-contradictory” argumentation that typifies much contemporary political debate, an ideal rhetorical perspective seeks out opposing perspectives, understands the importance of factual information, considers the inherent value dilemmas in all public controversies, and relies on structured discussion and debate to help achieve the critical goal of reasoned judgment. Public Deliberation should also be differentiated from dialogue; while similar in the sense that both encourage greater understanding and respect between diverse groups, public deliberation goes further by asking participants to focus on the often unpleasant costs and consequences of various options and ultimately come to a decision. (Excerpted from: http://cpd.colostate.edu/about-us/what-is-public-deliberation/)

Unit 5: Gender, Leadership, & Public Discourse

Topics:
- Gender and leadership

Note: Licensed social workers and NASW membership are disproportionately held by women (NASW 2015). The U.S. population is comprised of 1.02 females for every male. Women are equally qualified but institutional barriers prevent membership in leadership organizations (PEW Research Center 2015). The gender pay gap remains at 78%; spans across all occupations, is greater for women of color (54%), and increases with age (AAUW 2015). Jane Addams, the founder of the Social Work Profession won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1931. The impact that women have had, not only in the Social Work Profession, but in American society, has informed and lead public discourse.

Note: “We live in a racialized society that disadvantage the populations that will use the services at the agencies our DSW students are or will be leading. The disparities are well documented (from health to aging to access to quality education to income inequality to gender inequities). It is crucial that the social work profession do a better job of diagnosing the dynamics, intersectionality, and the structural realities of race, class, and gender in the United States and the effects on the wellbeing of all people. If we are to reverse the patterns of injustice, we need to understand better how they work and address how people think and act with respect to marginalized populations and the inequalities of power and opportunity in the workplace and social environments. Doctoral students must consider where and when the next generation of social work leaders will have the opportunity to: 1) learn new perspectives and develop/design innovative ways to address race, class, gender, diversity, and inclusion; 2) lead various initiatives dismantling the injustices and inequities that occur in service delivery systems and organizations/agencies; and 3) lead the public discourse on the grand challenges of social work and the prevailing social issues in the United States.” (Renee Smith Maddox)

VI. ATTENDANCE POLICY

Students are expected to attend every class and to remain in class for the duration of the unit. Failure to attend class or arriving late may impact your ability to achieve course objectives which could affect your course grade. Students are expected to notify the instructor by email (xxx@usc.edu) of any anticipated absence or reason for tardiness.

University of Southern California policy permits students to be excused from class for the observance of religious holy days. This policy also covers scheduled final examinations which conflict with students’ observance of a holy day. Students must make arrangements in advance to complete class work which will be missed, or to reschedule an examination, due to holy days observance.

Please refer to Scampus and to the USC School of Social Work Student Handbook for additional information on attendance policies.

VII. ACADEMIC CONDUCT

Plagiarism – presenting someone else’s ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words – is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Section 11, Behavior Violating University Standards https://scampus.usc.edu/1100-behavior-violating-university-standards-and-appropriate-sanctions/. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct, http://policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct/.

Discrimination, sexual assault, and harassment are not tolerated by the university. You are encouraged to report any incidents to the Office of Equity and Diversity http://equity.usc.edu/ or to the Department of Public Safety http://capsnet.usc.edu/department/department-public-safety/online-forms/contact-us. This is important for the safety whole USC community. Another member of the university community – such as a friend, classmate, advisor, or faculty member – can help initiate the report, or can initiate the report on behalf of another person. The Center for Women and Men http://www.usc.edu/student-affairs/cwm provides 24/7 confidential support, and the sexual assault resource center webpage sarc@usc.edu describes reporting options and other resources.

VIII. SUPPORT SYSTEMS

A number of USC’s schools provide support for students who need help with scholarly writing. Check with your advisor or program staff to find out more. Students whose primary language is not English should check with the American Language Institute http://dornsife.usc.edu/ali, which sponsors courses and workshops specifically for international graduate students. The Office of Disability Services and Programs http://sait.usc.edu/academicsupport/centerprograms/dsp/home_index.html provides certification for students with disabilities and helps arrange the relevant accommodations. If an officially declared emergency makes travel to campus infeasible, USC Emergency Information http://emergency.usc.edu will provide safety and other updates, including ways in which instruction will be continued by means of blackboard, teleconferencing, and other technology.
IX. Statement about Incompletes

The Grade of Incomplete (IN) can be assigned only if there is work not completed because of a documented illness or some other emergency occurring after the 12th week of the semester. Students must NOT assume that the instructor will agree to the grade of IN. Removal of the grade of IN must be instituted by the student and agreed to be the instructor and reported on the official “Incomplete Completion Form.”

X. Policy on Late or Make-Up Work

Papers are due on the day and time specified. Extensions will be granted only for extenuating circumstances. If the paper is late without permission, the grade will be affected.

XI. Policy on Changes to the Syllabus and/or Course Requirements

It may be necessary to make some adjustments in the syllabus during the semester in order to respond to unforeseen or extenuating circumstances. Adjustments that are made will be communicated to students both verbally and in writing.

XII. Code of Ethics of the National Association of Social Workers (Optional)

Approved by the 1996 NASW Delegate Assembly and revised by the 2008 NASW Delegate Assembly [http://www.socialworkers.org/pubs/Code/code.asp]

Preamble

The primary mission of the social work profession is to enhance human well being and help meet the basic human needs of all people, with particular attention to the needs and empowerment of people who are vulnerable, oppressed, and living in poverty. A historic and defining feature of social work is the profession’s focus on individual well being in a social context and the well being of society. Fundamental to social work is attention to the environmental forces that create, contribute to, and address problems in living.

Social workers promote social justice and social change with and on behalf of clients. “Clients” is used inclusively to refer to individuals, families, groups, organizations, and communities. Social workers are sensitive to cultural and ethnic diversity and strive to end discrimination, oppression, poverty, and other forms of social injustice. These activities may be in the form of direct practice, community organizing, supervision, consultation administration, advocacy, social and political action, policy development and implementation, education, and research and evaluation. Social workers seek to enhance the capacity of people to address their own needs. Social workers also seek to promote the responsiveness of organizations, communities, and other social institutions to individuals’ needs and social problems.

The mission of the social work profession is rooted in a set of core values. These core values, embraced by social workers throughout the profession’s history, are the foundation of social work’s unique purpose and perspective:

- Service
- Social justice
- Dignity and worth of the person
- Importance of human relationships
- Integrity
- Competence
This constellation of core values reflects what is unique to the social work profession. Core values, and the principles that flow from them, must be balanced within the context and complexity of the human experience.

XIII. COMPLAINTS

If you have a complaint or concern about the course or the instructor, please discuss it first with the instructor. If you feel cannot discuss it with the instructor, contact your advisor. If you need to pursue the issue further, contact the Director of the DSW program, Dr. Marv Southard (southard@us.edu). If you do still not receive a satisfactory response or solution, contact the chair of doctoral programs, Michael Hurlburt (hurlburt@usc.edu).
