Course Description
This marketing capstone course will build on your previous coursework by bridging theory, research, and practice to explore current issues that are facing marketing communication professionals. Each week will be devoted to a contemporary or emerging topic in the field. Through reading academic research, case studies, book chapters, and popular press pieces, this class will explore how marketers can best understand this rapidly-changing landscape.

This course will fulfill the capstone requirement for CMGT students in their penultimate or last semester. It is designed to illustrate the cumulative knowledge you have gained from prior coursework. While not mandatory, you are encouraged to have taken at least one CMGT marketing class before enrolling in this capstone.

Learning Objectives
• Examine central bodies of research within marketing communications
• Evaluate competing positions in academic debates
• Develop the ability to synthesize research in a productive way
• Understand the broad landscape of the marketing communication field
• Create a dialogue with practitioners through interviews
• Apply key ideas from academic work to specific current examples within marketing communication
• Conduct reviews of academic literature to evaluate the merits of a range of marketing communication literature, and synthesize these findings into a report and oral presentation.

Description and Assessment of Assignments

Weekly Application Assignments (25%)
After reading the week's assigned material, you will need to find an example that you think demonstrates the ideas about which you've read. It is also important for your assignment to integrate the ideas from across all your week's readings. If you decide to focus in on one of the readings, be sure that you demonstrate your understanding of how it fits into the broader set of readings. These weekly applications are an opportunity for you to demonstrate that you have engaged with and understand your readings.

Your example could take one of three general forms:

1. Academic article: Locate, read, and summarize an academic article that presents a related theory, case example, etc. Draw connections between the ideas in the article and those you read for class.
2. Interview: Talk to someone in the field about something in the reading. Ask them whether their experiences are consistent with the ideas presented in the readings, how the ideas might be useful in their work, etc. (This modality should include your own assessment of what you learned in the interview in addition to reporting the contents of the interview.)
3. Popular press/personal example: Read the newspaper or trade journals (Ad Age, etc) or think through your own experiences and find a story that relates to the week's readings.

During the semester you will post nine assignments, three of each type. One week of your choosing can be used as “freebies” (you don’t need to post an assignment those weeks).

The format of the posted assignment could take a variety of forms. It could be several paragraphs of text; it could be a narrated PowerPoint presentation; or it might include audio files or visual examples.

These will be posted on our class Wordpress blog. You are required to comment on two of your classmates’ assignments per week.

Midterm Paper (25%)

Conduct a 7-9 page literature review on one of the weekly topics or choose your own topic within Marketing Communication. This should be a topic that is timely and relevant. This will be an in-depth dive into one area of the literature to explore how academic researchers are examining an important issue facing marketing communication professionals today.

Final Paper and Presentation (35%)

For the Final Paper you will revise the midterm paper, and include 5-7 pages of application. You will choose a brand and explain how this brand could benefit from the key ideas set forth in your literature review. The oral presentation is a very important part of the assignment. In many situations, an oral presentation is all that the evaluators see. It should be polished and professional.

Participation (15%)

Class participation is an essential component of this class. We will spend time in class discussing the readings and working through cases that deal with challenges. You will be expected to come to class prepared, having read the assigned readings, with questions/comments prepared on those readings, and with case questions or application examples when requested. If you want to be sure you will receive a high participation grade, you should volunteer your thoughts, ideas, and responses verbally in class each week. This demonstrates both your engagement and your preparation. Sitting quietly does not contribute positively to the class.

Missing class: If you miss a class you will be expected to write a two-page paper on that week's material. You will discuss the topic with the instructor ahead of time and the paper will be due the date of the missed class. Failure to submit a paper will result in lowering the participation score by 10%.
