ENGL 263: AMERICAN LITERATURE

English 263 is a survey of American Literature. As an introduction, the course intends to develop and extend the nodding acquaintance that most students have with American writers and their works. Since it is an introductory course, English 263 is wedded to breadth of study. The course is historically constructed moving from the time before the Republic to our own moment. Students will confront a variety of texts and authors, periods and genres. We will look at how American authors and their works define and re-define our national character; we will look at the many questions these works raise about America, about its sense of itself, about its place in the world, and about literature. – American and otherwise. We will even look at some of the answers they give. The course’s goals are many; first, there is the simple celebration of literature’s challenge to doxa and all the uninformed opinions that rule and regulate our everyday; secondly there is the desire to offer a foundation for further studies not only in literature and art, but also in other fields; thirdly, there is the wish to recognize and indulge the pleasure one takes from these works: and finally … the list goes on.

COURSE AND LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Course Objectives:

This course cultivates a critical appreciation for human expression. Students will learn to read and interpret actively and analytically, to think critically and creatively, and to write and speak persuasively in order to evaluate ideas from multiple perspectives and to formulate informed opinions. Students should expect to analyze various kinds of texts in order to get a more nuanced sense of the subject and to improve their ability to read and to express opinions in a reasonable manner.

Learning Objectives:

1. Cultivate a critical appreciation for forms of human expression;

Conclusion
REQUIREMENTS:

There will be THREE papers and a TAKE-HOME FINAL EXAM Class participation is vital. Students will be expected to have read and prepared the required texts for each session so that they will be ready to engage in an informed discussion.

Papers:

The papers will be 5-7 pages. Topics will be assigned. (If a student wishes to pursue a topic of his/her own, this is acceptable. To do that the student must meet with me before she/he starts writing). Late papers will not be tolerated.

All papers will be typed and follow the proper manuscript conventions. If you are unclear about those conventions, please consult the usual manuals of style (e.g., The Chicago Manual of Style Online http://tinyurl.com/oettzyx). When writing the paper, all students are encouraged to meet with me during office hours, consult the folks in the writing center, or consult a writing manual, e.g., Greene, Gayle, Writing a Paper (BLBD). Late papers will not be tolerated.

Since there will be time to revise, it is understood that there will be at least two re-writes before the final draft is submitted. The papers are to be well written. The subject is to be presented in a literate manner. The prose should be clear and concise, free from confusing syntax and awkward or clumsy usage. The spelling and grammar should be correct. The papers should be well organized and coherent. There should be a defined structure, one that is orderly and intelligible. They should have a sound and substantial thesis, one that puts forth a topic. Aspects of the topic should be developed without going into unnecessary detail. Statements must be consistent. They should contain supporting evidence for assertions. When necessary, the papers should also have proper citations from reliable sources for direct quotations, and counter-intuitive or controversial statements.

Exams:

The Final Exam will be a take-home test. It will consist of FOUR essay questions. You will choose TWO. It will be comprehensive. A hard copy of the exam will be placed in my mailbox on or before the due date (DUE DATE TBA). There will be NO LATE EXAMS.

Participation:

Since we will be discussing the particulars of the texts, students should bring the readings to class and be prepared to discuss them. Students are expected to come to class prepared. It goes without saying that the text is to have been read, several times if possible. (“I have not read it,” is neither an acceptable response nor one that will be tolerated with good humor.) When reading the texts and preparing for class lectures and discussions, students should keep in mind that we are not engaged in the repeating of received opinions. We are engaged with critical and reflective thinking. The texts we will be reading are challenging. They raise questions about what we know, how we came to know it and the validity and meaning of that knowledge and our understanding, (which might make us apprehensive because we begin to sense that our knowledge might be inadequate). These texts encourage us to engage in critical and reflective thinking and to put our responses and answers to the question, as it were.

Shermis, S. Samuel, Critical Thinking: Helping Students Learn Reflectively (BLKBD)

Occasionally, I will post a discussion topic on Blackboard. When I do, I will send an email notifying you. The responses will be considered part of the participation grade.

Finally, it goes without saying: things happen. Hence changes might occur, and adjustments may be made during the course of the semester. If so the instructor will decide.

ADDITIONAL POLICIES

Electronic Gadgets
Computers, IPads, IPods, Smart Phones etc. etc., are part of our lives. They are extraordinary tools. They help in a number of ways. They are not only a part of our personal and professional lives; they are also a part of our educational and classroom experience. They are pedagogically useful. But they can also be annoying toys. Therefore, I encourage their use and discourage playing with them in class. To be clear, as long as these tools are used in class for class, as long as they are used to enhance education, everything is fine. But they are not to be used to answer and send emails, to shop, to play online games, or to surf the net, unless the surfing pertains to class. All that behavior is unacceptable. It is rude and disruptive. It interferes with classroom activities. It will not be tolerated.
