

CTCS 569: Latinx Media

Professor Laura Isabel Serna

Mondays 10 am - 1:50 pm

This seminar will explore the formation and definition of the category "Latinx Media." Beginning with the early, transnational circulation of media across the U.S.-Mexico border we will consider the geopolitics of media production and distribution in Puerto Rico, the rise of Spanish-language television, the use of media in struggles for social justice, and media industries cultivation of diverse audiences under rubrics such as Hispanic and Latino. We will explore the aesthetics of Latinx media and its relationship to cultural nationalism, Latin@futurism, and decolonial thought.
