ART 314 ILLUSTRATION FOR ART & DESIGN

Illustration techniques across the range of fine art, cartooning, street art, narrative arts, animation, scientific imaging, editorial cartooning and others. Digital and hybrid approaches.

Explore the fundamental principles of figurative narrative allegory in fine art and illustration, from a formal analysis of how the aesthetics of an images’ construction can help to promote its content. All areas of narrative image making craft are covered, from initial ideas/thumbnail layout and composition, to drawing and painting skills, to your thoughts and ideas in constructing a narrative and how they relate to the outside fine art, illustration, and cartooning and cultural universe. Discuss the image’s composition, along with how form helps to amplify the content. Strategies to create synaesthetic experiences for the viewer will be stressed as we look at how the student chooses to capture story, and time, space, and emotion.

Course Description
In this class, we explore the principles of illustration, a form of art based in narrative allegory.

This class introduces the most important aspects of the image-making craft, including idea generation, formal concerns (composition, technique, style, etc), and relation to the larger world of art, politics, and culture. We will explore the creation of images that seduce the viewer into extended observation and/or contemplation of meaning, drawing from our own experiences and perspectives to communicate ideas, emotions, and synaesthetic experiences, while experimenting with different genres, mediums, and stylistic approaches. In small and large group critiques, we will practice analyzing how an image's composition, metaphors, and visual language help to code or convey content. We will also simulate the life of an illustrator who completes and turns in real-world assignments.

Learning Objectives
1. Confidently interpret an idea into a visual format using research, metaphor, composition, and rendering
2. Develop one's artistic voice, while experimenting with different styles, approaches, and techniques
3. Engage one's strengths and interests in the field of illustration to understand what kind of work one is interested in producing

Prerequisite(s): None
Co-Requisite(s): None
Concurrent Enrollment: None
Recommended Preparation: Any drawing, painting, graphic design, or creative writing classes.

Course Notes
You are expected to bring paper and either a pencil or pen to every class. A digital device you can draw with, such as a laptop or tablet or iPad, is not necessary to bring, but highly encouraged. Any other materials of your choice--brushes, inks, watercolors, acrylics, charcoal, etc--are optional but delightful.

Technological Proficiency and Hardware/Software Required
Since all homework assignments will be delivered digitally as high resolution TIFs, PSDs, MP4s, or GIFs, a computer or tablet (iPad Pro, Surface Pro, etc) and basic knowledge of Adobe Photoshop, Procreate, Adobe Illustrator, and/or equivalents (GIMP, Clip Studio) will be necessary. If students choose to work on the assignments using traditional media, some familiarity with scanning at high resolutions or taking photographs will be needed.

Description and Assessment of Assignments
All homework in this class will be assigned as part of Life Sim.

You’re an illustrator trying to find independence and stability. You’ve found a place to live that isn’t too pricey if you share it with roommates, but between rent, food, utility bills, health insurance, car payments, and student loans, your cost of living is roughly $1500 per month.

Luckily, every week you receive freelance illustration assignments from various art directors who are big fans of your work. They’re excited to see what you’ll create for them.

Life Sim is based on real emails, real budgets, real briefs, and real deadlines. You will sign up at the beginning of each class for a category of illustration you'd like to create artwork in; I will contact you as Art Director Angie and assign you an illustration to draw in that category. Once you receive the assignment (which I will send by Saturday afternoon), you must reply by Sunday night at midnight PST or the opportunity will expire. Once you reply, you will draw 3-4 sketches and turn them in by the sketch deadline.
(5 PM on the day indicated in the email) and then, once Art Director Angie approves one of the sketches, you will take that sketch to final before 5 PM on the due date, making any requested revisions. There may be revisions requested after the final is turned in, for which you will have an extension of 24 hours to complete. The assignment will not be considered complete unless all steps are completed in this order, and on time.

At the end of the semester, you will come away with 7-10 illustrations, which will give you space to learn about metaphor and meaning, and help you hone in on your voice and your own strengths and weaknesses, as well as an understanding of how you would like to relate to the world as an artist.

60% of your grade is based on your Life Sim balance at the end of the semester. You need to make $1500 a month--your hypothetical cost of living--or $6000 by the end of the semester. Please refer to the grading section for details on how grading works if you fall short. Life Sim assignments will usually be worth anywhere from $600 to $1200 each, with some exceptions, and turnaround will be anywhere from 5 days to two weeks.

Once you have accepted an assignment you are expected to complete it, but you may turn down an assignment in reply to the original query. Part of the Life Sim is learning time management, and signing up for/accepting enough work to cover your bills is your responsibility; I entrust you with agency over your time management. But please don’t put yourself in a situation where it’s the end of the semester, and you’ve made $2200 out of the $6000 total needed and your imaginary roommates have kicked you out for non-payment of rent and you’ve moved back into your imaginary childhood bedroom, and in the actual world you’ve failed the class.

Midterm Project:
For the midterm project, you will make a full-page illustration on a theme to be determined by the entire class.

We will discuss the midterm topic on February 14th. Everyone in the class will participate in brainstorming potential topics. I’ll narrow it down to several options, and we will all vote on the topic that will be the theme for everyone in class to interpret. This should be an exercise in approaching a theme in a way that resonates for yourself while maintaining a sense of personal ownership and agency over the illustration.

Sketches and/or works in progress will be brought to class on February 21st for large group critique before going to final.

The finished midterm project will be sent by email to me by 5 PM on February 26th. I will collect all of the midterm illustrations into a small art zine to distribute to each of you, so timeliness is essential to give me time to lay out and print the zine.

Final Project:
The final project is a chance for you to create a completely self-directed illustration project. We will begin brainstorming on April 3rd and we’ll spend class time working on it until May 8th.

It could be a capstone piece for your portfolio to be used in promo materials you send out, a small illustrated zine about all the cars you’ve ever loved, a pitch with sample spreads for a children’s book you want to create, a 5-second looping animated GIF about your experiences with meditation, scientific illustrations of an imaginary creature, several key Major Arcana tarot card designs, a website exploring LGBTQ+ history, a faux-tapestry of your original characters exploring an alien landscape, a visual encapsulation of the feeling of summer… anything. Be ambitious, but have fun.

Syllabus for 314 ART: Illustration for Art & Design
Once you have your idea, I will give feedback and/or the green light. During the sketch stage, on April 24th, you will also receive input from the class at the large group critique. The final versions are due on May 6th.

We will hold an exhibition of all the finished projects in class on May 8th. Make sure your final is printed out (or ready to show on a laptop if in GIF form) before the exhibition.

Grading

Your final grade will be based on four factors: participation in class discussions and exercises, Life Sim homework assignment completion, your midterm project, and your final project.

15% Participation
60% Life Sim
10% Midterm
15% Final

Life Sim grading is based on timeliness and completion. Over the course of the semester, you will need to complete enough assignments to reach the $6000 in rent, etc that constitute your $1500/mo survival costs.

The reason Life Sim is graded entirely on completion is because I trust your own judgment and professionalism when it comes to the quality of your pieces. This is intended to help you develop and rely on your own sense of what looks “right” for you, as well as to give you space for experimentation without fear of a bad grade, and because it’s an accurate reflection of the life of a freelance illustrator.

If you fall short of $6000, every $250 short of $6000 = 5% of your grade lost. For example, if you made only $5000 in Life Sim but got full marks on participation, midterm, and final, you would get 80%/100%, a B-. If you made $4000 in Life Sim but got full marks on participation, midterm, and final, you would get 60%/100%, a D. Want to know your grade progress? Add up the fees from the assignments you have completed; you should be making over $1500 every 4 weeks of class. You can also email me at any time to find out your progress.

If you are late on a Life Sim assignment, you will lose 5% of your grade. This cannot be made up by taking extra assignments.

The Midterm and Final grades will be based on your showstopper midterm and final projects, which should showcase your effort and thought put into creating a piece that reflects your interests and personality.

Assignment Submission Policy

All Life Sim final art will be delivered digitally, so if you prefer to work in traditional media, be prepared to scan your work in. Dimensions will be in the assignment brief. Files should be flattened high-resolution (300 dpi+) PSD or TIF files—or, if animated, GIF files under 2 MB or MP4 files under 7 MB. If the assignment is not in the correct dimensions, I will ask for revisions until it is; no assignment will be accepted unless it conforms to the dimensions requested in the brief.
Either attach the file in your email thread with Art Director Angie or use Dropbox, Google Drive, or whatever file transfer service you prefer.

This is also a group critique class, and each student is expected to prepare previews of their Life Sim homework, wherever they are in the process—sketches, WIP, finals—to discuss with other students in small group critique, and each student is also expected to contribute to discussion of each other's works.

Additional Policies

Life Sim sign-ups will be up on the board only for the first 15 minutes of class. If you are more than 15 minutes late, you will miss the Life Sim homework sign-up for that week. If you miss a class, you will miss the Life Sim sign-up for the week.

If you are late/absent but email me with an explanation, I will assign you an illustration in the Personal/Uncommissioned category, but you will not be able to participate in the usual commissioned Life Sim homework for that week. If you do not email me with an explanation, I will not assign you make-up work.

After 2 absences, I will have a stern talk (!) with you and I'll also dock your grade by 5% per unexplained absence after the initial 2. Class participation—connecting with your fellow artists, pushing yourself with drawing exercises outside of your comfort zone, learning to identify tired approaches versus strong and interesting approaches, seeing your work in the context of your peers—is necessary.

Even more important than coming to every class on time: send in your sketches and final illustrations no later than 5 PM PST on the day they are due. It is of critical importance to be on time with your illustrations. In the working world, magazine issues close, books have production schedules and printing deadlines, TV shows need the art so they can send it to Korea for animation, art directors stay late panicking and trying to find a photo to replace your late illustration in the newspaper, or productions pay rush fees because your late illustration delayed everything. It costs other professionals money, time, and stress when you're late.

Submission is based on server timestamp. When working on final files, try to give yourself enough time to account for technical issues and always make backups as you work. There is a grace period of one hour but no more.

If you are late turning in the final illustration for Life Sim, you will lose 5% of your total grade. I will not remind or nag you—I will write down that this assignment came in late in my Life Sim spreadsheet, and at the end of the semester, I will count up the late assignments and deduct from your grade accordingly. I don't do this because I love arbitrary rules and hate you. The deductions stand as representations of the professional black marks against you in the real world for being late—the clients that don't complain but don't come back, the reputation that spreads when art directors or other artists discuss you, the shrinking of work opportunities, etc.

That said, I know life gets in the way. You may always ask for extensions by emailing me and proposing a new deadline in advance of your due date. But for your own sake, I don't encourage this—once you get used to having extensions, you will likely find time management much harder because the boundaries are not as clear. I strongly prefer for you to turn in something half-baked on time than something great a week late. Turning in iffy pieces is part of this process of experimenting and learning time management. Just try to excel on the next one!

I will be checking my inbox regularly and will try to answer promptly, but I can't guarantee checking my email outside the hours of 9am to 5pm on weekdays.

Code of Conduct
Only constructive critique will be allowed. Any insults or damaging or malevolent comments will invite consideration for immediate expulsion from the class. In addition, no racist, misogynist, homophobic, transphobic, ableist, or otherwise bigoted remarks or work will be allowed in this course. If I judge a comment or work to be harmful in this way, I will have a talk with you; if it happens more than once, expulsion from the class will be considered.

I expect all assignments in this class to have been created by you, and you alone, from concept to finish.

Tracing or reusing any part of someone else’s artwork without their permission and credit is plagiarism. Copying a concept or composition without giving credit to the other artist is plagiarism. Master copies, with proper credit and for practice, are not plagiarism but they are not allowed in this specific course because the point of this class is to challenge yourself to create original artwork. You will lose that Life Sim assignment’s income, you’ll have to write a 1000-word essay on plagiarism, and 10% will be knocked off your final grade—this is all for the first plagiarism infraction. You’ll get an auto-fail in the class for the second. Please don’t make me do this to you. There is zero reason to plagiarize in my class!! I am not expecting you to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel! I literally just want you to draw however you want to draw!

Please don’t even toe the line of "maybe it’s okay if I copy this part, but I’ll change this part," or “it’s fanart so it’s okay if I trace,” or “I copied someone else’s art but I didn’t trace it, so it’s fine.” If I find out your piece was copied from someone else's artwork or you are misrepresenting someone else’s work as your own, and I have to argue with you about why your piece was plagiarized, it will automatically count as plagiarized and will be treated as such.

Auto-plagiarism, or "double-dipping" by turning in assignments for this class that you made for other classes, is also a form of academic dishonesty, and will incur the loss of the Life Sim assignment’s income and 5% knocked off your final grade for each infraction.

If in doubt—if you’re wondering about whether or not this image you’re working on is too close to that beautiful illustration you were looking at for inspiration, or if your fanart is maybe too close to the original promo art, or if you are working with collage or in homage and you are not sure if you've transformed your sources enough—ask me, and I will be able to clarify for you what changes are needed, if any. As long as you ask me for help and make any changes I request, I won’t consider it plagiarism, as we are all here to learn. But if you haven’t checked with me and I find out that plagiarism has occurred, you will face the consequences listed above: losing the Life Sim fee, writing a 1000-word essay on plagiarism, and 10% off the final grade for the first infraction, and an auto-fail for the second infraction.

Rule of thumb: if you’re looking closely at an illustration for inspiration while you’re thinking about your concept, sketching, or drawing, put it away. When you’re working on your art, try to think of any drawings that inspired you like they’re sketches I’ve already shot down, and I don’t want to see them again. Find something new.

Try to spread out your inspiration too--don’t let only one artist inspire you, or you will wind up taking too much from them. Learn from others in bits and pieces and transform what you learned from them, but more importantly, have faith in your own concepts, your own perspective, your own voice. Taking a great deal of influence from another artist is generally accidental, and I do understand. Powerful work inspires. But wherever you can, try to focus on the image you are making and the approach you bring to it. 😊

For other code of conduct issues that may arise that are not covered here, I will create a written amendment to the syllabus that I expect you to sign to be able to continue taking the class, and the rest of the class will receive notice of the amendment as well. You will be bound by the rules and consequences in the amendment for any further infractions. I don’t expect this to come up, but it’s here to cover all the edge cases.

Last Notes
Please take professional pride in creating your illustrations, even if you’re not excited about the subject assigned. For your Life Sim grade, I will be grading based on completion and timeliness of assignments, but I would still like you to turn in pieces that show your thought and effort. Those are the qualities that you need in the world as a working illustrator (or in any profession, really)—qualities that are much more important than any grade.

If what you’re turning in isn’t up to your standards or isn’t a piece you are proud of, I understand that some pieces just don’t come out as well as you’d like, so just try your best on the next assignment. I will treat you like a professional and a peer, and I am looking forward to seeing you rise to the occasion.

Statement on Academic Conduct and Support Systems

Academic Conduct
Plagiarism--presenting someone else's ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words--is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Section 11, Behavior Violating University Standards: https://scampus.usc.edu/1100-behavior-violating-university-standards-and-appropriate-sanctions. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus & university policies on scientific misconduct: http://policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct.

Discrimination, Sexual Assault, Harassment
Discrimination, sexual assault, and harassment are not tolerated by the university. You are encouraged to report any incidents to the Office of Equity and Diversity http://equity.usc.edu or to the Department of Public Safety http://adminopsnet.usc.edu/department/department-public-safety. This is important for the safety of the whole USC community. Another member of the university community--such as a friend, classmate, advisor, or faculty member--can help initiate the report, or can initiate the report on behalf of another person.
