2021 Fall Semester
Syllabus

Day/Time: Monday, Wednesday, and Friday 3:00 - 3:50pm

Location: THH 106

Course Description

We all understand that the carbohydrates, proteins, and fats we consume provide our bodies with energy, but there are biologically-active nutritional chemicals that do not provide energy. What roles do these molecules serve in our body? By what mechanisms do they impact our health? These are the questions that we will address throughout this course.

The class will consist of a mixture of lecture and in-class discussion. Topics covered include, amino acid metabolism, lipid synthesis, and the metabolic functions of vitamins and minerals. The course will also explore the functions of biologically-active non-nutrients such as caffeine and phytochemicals. This course will reinforce the principles taught in BISC 330/312, and expand upon them as students learn the biochemical basis of nutrition's impact on metabolic functions.

Learning Objectives

After completion of homework, in-class discussions and examinations, students should be able to effectively execute the following:

1. Clear written communication of complex concepts in biochemistry.
2. Compare and contrast biochemical regulatory mechanisms.
3. Establish connections between the metabolism of various nutrients.
4. Establish connections between nutrient metabolism and nutrition-based diseases.

Prerequisite: BISC 330L (Biochemistry)

I. Textbook (Optional)

Stipanuck, Martha H., Caudill, Marie A. Biochemical, Physiological, and Molecular Aspects of Human Nutrition (4th Edition, 2019).

II. Description and Assessment of Assignments

Exams are typically 30% multiple-choice, and 70% written response. They will be based upon concepts discussed in lecture and homework. Any information presented outside of lecture or homework assignments will not be tested upon, unless specifically stated.

Homework contains problems that require a written response. Homework that receives full credit will be turned in before the beginning of class, and contains well-reasoned and accurate responses to the questions. Late homework will not be accepted. Exceptions can be made for students under certain circumstances.

III. Grading Breakdown

The course grade will be based upon three lecture exams, homework, and quizzes. Each exam will be worth 100 points, and 20% of the overall grade. Homework assignments will vary in length, and total 30% of the overall grade. There will be eight short homework assignments worth 5 points, and six longer assignments worth 10 points each. Some lecture meetings will be dedicated to covering the longer homework assignments (indicated on lecture schedule).

Midterm 1: 100 points

Midterm 2: 100 points

Final Exam: 100 points

Homework: 100 points

Total: 400 points

Typical Grade Breakdown:

A range: 80-100%

B range: 70-79%

C range: 60-69%

Attendance: Exams must be taken during the scheduled class period. Attendance in lecture is not required, but is recommended, as we will be reviewing homework as well as going over lecture material.
