Course Description

A central theme and topic of discussion in many Annenberg classes is that of “change”; more specifically how the study of communication might best prepare students for rapidly changing social conditions. We challenge our students to consider: 1) the changing political, economic, technological and cultural context of media and communication technologies – the sociocultural practices of meaning making; and 2) how communication practices have built on earlier histories/understandings of communication, media, and society. Students have responded to these ideas by asking how they should approach the inevitability of change in the communication fields and prepare – professionally, intellectually, and socially – for becoming and being responsive, innovative, and transformative agents and citizens amid such change?

A core theory of this course is that cultivating curious, critical, and proactive habits is the best way to approach the unknown future. To this end we begin with an exploration of the ideas and practice of critical thinking, and move to an examination of identity, institutions, globalization and networks with a constant focus on the role of media and communication policy and practice. The course will encourage students to see and understand change through different lenses and concepts, and consider their significance in relation to what may be uncomfortable controversies – in such arenas as race, gender, politics, government, education, markets, and religion.

This is a class for lower-level college undergraduate students at a prestigious private university. The lectures and class discussions are meant to help students understand how to read and listen critically, and to demonstrate the ability to comprehend, analyze and evaluate various historical and contemporary events, struggles, and perceived “certainties.” Thus, while some themes will be presented to students historically and theoretically, the class will also offer opportunities via student-driven case studies connected to our contemporary moment.

Student Learning Outcomes

Students in this course will learn how to:

- Compare, analyze and evaluate both academic and popular writing;
- Identify and apply the benefits and limits of theory to communication practice;
- Assess concepts (such as race, gender, nationality, class and networks) in relationship to communication;
- Gain and retain an awareness of their own agency and power to instigate change, while being cognizant of systems and structures of constraint; and
- Sharpen both critical thinking skills and empathy and the ability to demonstrate those skills.

There are no prerequisite to this course, beside a commitment to demonstrating the habits of scholarship and an open mind.

Course Notes

This is an in-person course, but we will meet for the first week online. This is not a course to be taken asynchronously, but the first two lectures will be recorded and others will be recorded at the instructors discretion. All readings, podcasts and some video will be made available via Blackboard. Students are expected to read, listen to or watch all the assigned course material before class.

Policies and Procedures

Additional Policies (including DIEA statement)

Students are required to do all weekly readings, and be prepared to contribute to class discussions. Class discussions should be honest but respectful, no class member should be subject to name-calling or derision in class or in any other forum (including online communication).

Attendance is mandatory for both lectures and discussion section. Students participating on Zoom are required to have their camera on and respond to prompts as if they are in class. Students who, without proof of medical or family emergency, miss more than two sections of lecture or discussion will have their grades reduced and risk failing the course.

Communication

Please feel free to meet with the Professor during office hours, but make an appointment and clarify whether you are open to other students meeting at the same time.

Note from Professor: I get too much email, and I will not respond to email asking procedural questions already address in this syllabus or in class, but will attempt to respond to all other email within 48 hours.

Technological Proficiency and Hardware/Software Required

Access to a relatively up-to-date desktop or laptop with broadband internet access is required. We will be relying on Zoom for the initial week of class (and perhaps longer), and all of our coursework will be accessed via Blackboard, all software and hardware necessary to participate effectively in class should be available to the student before the first class.

Required Readings and Supplementary Materials

All required readings and other supplementary materials will be provided on Blackboard.

Description and Assessment of Assignments

Reading Posts: You will be expected to write a short reaction to the readings each week.

The posts should be no more than two pages. Except for the first week, posts are due before class. It should cover all the readings that week; and answer the following:

- 1) What is the major point made by the author/s?
- 2) How does it contrast with other readings that week?
- 3) Do you agree or disagree and why? What do you think?

A link will be created for you to turn in a copy of your readings posts. Posts will be marked down a grade for each week they are late.

Case Studies – Presentations and Response Papers: You will receive details about each case study separately. Each case study will require group work, a group presentation, and an individual response paper. Both the group presentation and the individual response should demonstrate critical thinking skills in response to the prompt.

Midterm: The midterm will be a timed exam using true/false, multiple choice, fill-in the blank and short essay questions. It will cover material in the first half of class.

Final Exam: The final exam will be an essay in response to a question/prompt, it will seek to determine whether the student has learned the core lessons of the semester.

All assignments must be completed and handed in on time to avoid a grade reduction (1/3 of a grade per day including weekends). If you are unable to turn in an assignment due to illness or a family emergency, you must provide written documentation to be excused. Discuss your situation with either the Professor or Teaching Assistant in a timely manner.

Grading Breakdown

Assignment	Points	% of Grade
Reading Posts	20	20%
Case Study/Group Work	20	20%
Case Study/Individual Response Papers	10	10%
Midterm	25	25%
Final	25	25%
TOTAL	100	100%

Grading Scale

95 to 100%: A	90% to 94%: A-	86% to 89%: B+	82% to 85%: B
80% to 81%: B-	77% to 79%: C+	74% to 76%: C	70% to 73%: C-
67% to 69%: D+	64% to 66%: D	60% to 63%: D-	0% to 59%: F

Grading Standards

Letter Grade	Description
A	Excellent; demonstrates extraordinarily high achievement; comprehensive knowledge and understanding of subject matter; all expectations met and exceeded.
B	Good; moderately broad knowledge and understanding of subject matter; explicitly or implicitly demonstrates good, if not thorough understanding; only minor substantive shortcomings.
C	Satisfactory/Fair; reasonable knowledge and understanding of subject matter; most expectations are met; despite any shortcomings, demonstrates basic level of understanding.
D	Marginal; minimal knowledge and understanding of subject matter; more than one significant shortcoming; deficiencies indicate only the most rudimentary level of understanding.
F	Failing; unacceptably low level of knowledge and understanding of subject matter; deficiencies indicate lack of understanding.

Grading Timeline

Grading Timeframe and Missing or Inaccurate Score Inquiries/Disputes

Every attempt will be made to grade assignments/exams and post grades within two weeks. Scores for all assignments and exams are regularly updated on Blackboard. You are responsible for notifying the Instructor within one (1) week of a score posting if you think a score is missing or inaccurate. Moreover, you only have this period of time to contest a score on an assignment/exam. If you fail to inquire/notify us of any discrepancy, missing score, or contest a score within one week of the date the score is posted, no further changes will be made.

Assignment Submission Policy

- A. All assignments are due on the dates specified. Lacking prior discussion and agreement with the instructor, late readings posts and case study responses will be marked down one full grade for each week the assignment is late. Unless there is a medical excuse, late midterms and finals will automatically be given an F.
- B. Assignments must be submitted via email to the professor and your TA, unless otherwise specified.

Course Schedule: A Weekly Breakdown

Note: This course will respond to recent events and so assigned readings are likely to change, we will give you notice about any updates to this weekly rundown prior to the relevant week.

PART 1: CONTOURS OF CHANGE: IDENTITY AND COMMUNITY

This portion of the class will establish theories and ways of understanding change. Students will consider what change means abstractly and as it manifests itself through historical and contemporary examples. They will see change as dynamic and evidenced by shifts in how they see themselves, how they communicate with others, and how they are shaped by the communities they are born into and the communities they choose. This section will also look at the changing definitions of gender, race and ethnicity, and the role of media.

Week 1: Critical Thinking/Making Sense of Change – Jan. 11 & 13

- Why We Believe Obvious Untruths
- Intro Into Critical Thinking
- Why Human Aren't the Worst (Podcast)
- What the New Right Sees
- Why Republicans Keep Falling for Trump
- The Left is Also Guilty of Unscientific Dogma

Statement on Academic Conduct and Support Systems

a. Academic Conduct

Plagiarism

Plagiarism – presenting someone else’s ideas as your own, either verbatim or recast in your own words – is a serious academic offense with serious consequences. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Part B, Section 11, “Behavior Violating University Standards” policy.usc.edu/scampus-part-b. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct, policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct.

The School of Communication maintains a commitment to the highest standards of ethical conduct and academic excellence. Any student found responsible for plagiarism, fabrication, cheating on examinations, or purchasing papers or other assignments will be reported to the Office of Student Judicial Affairs and Community Standards and may be dismissed from the School of Communication. There are no exceptions to the school’s policy.

In addition, it is assumed that the work you submit for this course is work you have produced entirely by yourself, and has not been previously produced by you for submission in another course, without approval of the instructor.

Professor bio:

Mark Lloyd is a Clinical Professor at the University of Southern California-Annenberg School of Communication. He is a communication lawyer and a journalist.

A former Associate General Counsel at the Federal Communications Commission, Lloyd was also the vice president for strategic initiatives at the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights/Education Fund, the Director of Media Policy at New America, and a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress – directing research efforts at all these institutions. Lloyd's research is included in a co-edited volume The Communications Crisis in America and his book Prologue to a Farce, Communication and Democracy in America. Lloyd served on the Biden Policy Team with a focus on anchor institutions and innovation. His other government service includes time on the Clinton Transition Team, and working in the personnel office of the Clinton White House.

Professor Lloyd has been teaching at the USC/Annenberg School since 2013. His academic career includes two years as a visiting scholar at MIT, several years teaching communication policy at the Georgetown University Public Policy Institute, and from 2018 to 2020 he was a professor of professional practice in the Max Bell School of Public Policy at McGill University in Montreal.

Prof. Lloyd graduated from the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor with a double major in journalism and political science, and from the Georgetown University Law Center.

Teaching Assistant bio:

Ana Howe Bukowski is a writer, arts educator, and doctoral student at USC's Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism. Their research attends to the relationships between histories of public access television, community video practices, HIV/AIDS media, and queer histories of music and the moving image, all with an emphasis upon the regional context of Los Angeles. While at USC they have served as a committee member of Critical Mediations, Annenberg's communication and cultural studies graduate conference, and participated in an after school arts teaching initiative in collaboration with the Roski School of Art and Design and the California African American Museum.

Ana received an MA in Art History from McGill University and a BA in Art History and Book and Media Studies from the University of Toronto. Prior to joining USC, they worked in New York in the fashion industry and collaborated on projects for Supreme, Virgil Abloh, Fenty, Nike, Jordan, Awake NY, Fear of God Essentials, Converse, and others. Their work has been published in a variety of academic and popular publications.
