Course Description

Law 300 is a course about the fundamental concepts of law and legal systems, with a particular focus on the American legal system. It invites you to reflect on law and its status as a social practice from the outside, and to learn about the internal perspective of lawyers and judges who are responsible for giving legal reasons for deciding legal disputes. The course combines theoretical questions about law and legal systems in general with more specific questions about particular areas of law. It includes readings in legal theory, legal doctrine, political philosophy, and the review of judicial decisions. You will be expected to analyze and think critically about these cases and materials, respond in class to questions that prompt you to apply your growing legal reasoning and theoretical skills, and discuss with classmates difficult and contested questions of law, morality, and policy. The central aim of the class is to help you to begin thinking about law as a constitutive part of our social world, about the central discussions in legal theory, and about the ways in which these discussions touch upon and intersect with more specific issues in central areas of law, such as contracts, property, constitutional law, and international law, as well as with deeper questions about morality, justice, and politics.

Prerequisite(s), co-requisite(s), or recommended preparation:

None.

Required Materials (e.g., textbooks or other)

None. All materials will be provided by me.

Learning Objectives

Students who attend the seminar throughout the semester and satisfactorily complete the assignments required in the section below, will be able to:

- Formulate theoretical claims about law, legal reasoning, and the legal system.
- Analyze and evaluate theoretical claims about law, legal reasoning, and legal systems.
- Understand some of the basic concepts of legal theory and legal practice.
- Have a basic grasp of the practice of legal reasoning across diverse areas of substantive law.

Description and Assessment of Assignments

Grading for this course will depend on three components:

- Short papers (50%).
- Final exam (50%).
- Class participation (see below).
Short papers. Throughout the semester, you will need to submit three single-spaced, two to three-page papers about any specific issue(s) raised by, discussed in, or connected to the readings, according to the following schedule:

By midnight of

February 3: paper regarding any topic covered in sections 1-7.
March 3: sections 8-14.
April 7: sections 15-22.

For grading, I will drop the lowest scoring paper. Only the two highest scoring papers will be considered for your evaluation.

I will not accept late papers, except in cases of illness or some other emergency situation. If you find yourself in this position, please let me know as soon as you are able to do so.

Class attendance and participation. You must attend every class, barring sickness or special excuse, in which case you should inform me of your absence prior to the class you will miss.

The participation component is pass/fail. During the semester, I will call upon you randomly to discuss the topics or readings of that class. As long as you are able to contribute whenever I ask you to discuss the topics or readings, you will get credit for this component. You can only fail this component if you are not prepared to talk about the topics or readings at all. “Pass” means that your grade is fully determined by your score on the short papers and final exam. “Fail” means that your final grade will be negatively affected by up to one step (e.g. from A to A-).

I realize that occasionally something comes up that prevents you from being fully prepared. If you find yourself in this position, please let me know prior to the class for which you aren’t prepared.
Final exam. This is the central graded component of the course. It will include two essay questions on one or more of the topics of the semester. The exam will be open-book.

Grading Breakdown

See above.

Course-specific Policies

You are expected to engage in substantive discussion respectfully and as would be expected in a professional environment.

Regular and punctual attendance is expected.

Office Hours

- A Zoom link will be open Tuesday and Thursday, between 2:00PM and 3:00 PM. Feel free to drop in to discuss any issues related to the class or class materials.
- You are also always welcome to email me with any questions, concerns, and comments you might have.

Disability Accommodations

If you are entitled to a disability accommodation, please email your accommodation letter to undergraduate@law.usc.edu. Please do not give it to me or discuss your disability or accommodation with me, unless those who respond to the email you send to undergraduate@law.usc.edu ask you to do so.
