Course Description and Learning Objectives

What is a just society? How should our political, economic, and legal institutions be designed if our goal is to live in a just society? As citizens, are we under a special duty to obey the laws of our society? What forms of resistance, if any, to unjust laws in a democracy are permissible? Is there any sense in which wages in a free market economy can be unjust or exploitative? What is the relationship between freedom and money? What restrictions on immigration, if any, are compatible with living in a just global community? Do we have duties of justice arising from wrongs committed by past generations? Can there be systemic forms of injustice without any individuals acting unjustly?

This course will focus on these questions, among others, and in doing so provide you with the opportunity to think critically about issues that are both philosophically interesting and politically important.

Upon completion of this course you should be able to identify the central factors relevant in differentiating competing conceptions of justice and good citizenship. You should be able to engage in clear, careful analysis of how we, as moral agents and citizens, may be required to act to bring about a more just society and a more just world, and also be able to make informed contributions to debates about how we might improve legal, economic, and political institutions.

Required Texts

All the required texts will be posted on Blackboard.

Note that it is strictly forbidden to use and/or distribute these texts for any purpose other than reading for the class. Doing so would constitute a copyright violation.

Grading

Participation:	10% of provisional grade
Writing Assignments:	30% of provisional grade
Midterm paper:	30% of provisional grade
Final exam:	30% of provisional grade

Your grades for participation, writing assignments, the midterm, and the final exam constitute your provisional grade for the course. Your final grade can also be affected by your attendance and/or your participation in the JEP educational program. More on all this below.

Participation: Participation in discussion sections is an important part of making the course a success. Coming to your discussion section prepared, having done the required reading, and regularly making thoughtful contributions to the discussion is something on which you will be assessed. Your TA will provide more details on how participation will be assessed.

Writing Assignments: For the weekly writing assignments you must write 300-350 words in response to an assigned question, which must be submitted to your discussion section instructor prior to the relevant discussion section (details regarding submission will be provided by your instructor). Each assignment will be graded, and you may choose which weeks to submit your writing assignments, but you must submit 5 (and no more than 5) assignments during the semester.

The Midterm Paper: is 2,000-2,300 words in length. You are required to submit the essay via Blackboard. There will be a penalty of one letter grade increment for every day after the deadline an essay is submitted. So, for example, if you submit your paper one day late, and the paper is judged to be worth an A, you will only receive an A- grade for the paper. If you submit the same paper two days late, it will receive a grade of B+, and so on. Note that a submission on the correct date but after the 5pm deadline will count as one day late.

The midterm paper is due Friday February 17th before 5pm.

The final exam will be Friday May 5th at 11am.

Further details about the content of the midterm paper and the final exam will be provided in due course. Please see the University Catalogue or Grade Handbook for definitions of particular grades.

Attendance: Attendance at lectures and discussion sections is mandatory. If you are absent from more than six lectures without a valid and verifiable excuse your final grade will be lowered by one grade increment. If you are absent from more than ten lectures without a valid and verifiable excuse your final grade will be lowered by two increments. If you are absent from more than two discussion sections without a valid and verifiable excuse your final grade will be lowered by one grade increment. If you are absent from more than four discussion sections your final grade will be lowered by two increments.

Note: This course is in-person only: there is no Zoom component.

JEP: Also, students who choose to participate in USC's Joint Educational Project and successfully complete that program will receive an increase of one letter grade increment on their final grade. So, for example, if your provisional grade is a B+ but you successfully complete the JEP program this semester, you will receive a final grade of A-. Students who choose to register in the JEP program must inform their TA's of this fact at the start of semester.

Preparation for Class/Class Format

The format for the course is a combination of lectures and discussion, and you are encouraged to ask questions of me, your discussion instructor, and of each other whenever something is puzzling, or whenever you feel an important point is being overlooked. The aim of the course is to have thoughtful and well-reasoned discussions and arguments about the issues, and the course will be more intellectually rewarding the more each person joins in the discussion. Participating in discussion sections is also a small part of how you will be assessed (see above). If you are particularly uncomfortable with public speaking, please speak to your discussion section instructor about this.

You will be expected to come to the discussion sections having done the required reading. When you prepare for class, it's important not simply to read the assigned material, but to read it carefully and critically. This may be the first time you have read philosophical work, and the style of writing and argument can take some getting used to. You will see from the syllabus that I have not assigned a great deal of reading for each week measured in terms of the number of pages, but the material is sometimes dense and difficult: a lot of complicated arguments can be found in the space of just a few pages, and this means you may need to read the material more than once to gain a clear understanding of an author's argument. I strongly encourage you to make careful notes as you read. Of course different people have different methods of note-taking, but whatever your method, you should be taking notes in a way that will help you achieve the following aims:

- Gain a clear understanding of the author's main claims and the arguments the author uses to try and establish these claims. You have a clear understanding when you can accurately summarize the author's key claims and arguments in your own words.
- Identify any terms/claims/ideas that remain puzzling to you.
- Try to understand how the author's view might be challenged. This means you must read with a critical eye. Try to identify the weak points in an argument or think of counterexamples to what the author is saying, or look for implications of their view that might seem unacceptable or inconsistent.
- Try to understand the wider implications of the author's position—see how the view fits (or doesn't fit) with the views of other philosophers we are reading.

Note: Lecture slides will be made available via Blackboard at the end of each week. You should check Blackboard and your University email account regularly for information about the course

Policies on Disability and Academic Integrity

Students who need to request accommodations based on a disability are required to register each semester with the Disability Services and Programs. In addition, a letter of verification to the instructors from the Disability Services and Programs is needed for the semester you are enrolled in this course. If you have any questions concerning this procedure, please contact the course instructor and Disability Services and Programs at (213) 740-0776, STU 301.

No form of plagiarism or other type of academic dishonesty will be tolerated, and ignorance of the rules regarding plagiarism is no excuse. If in any doubt about what constitutes plagiarism or any other question about academic integrity, please ask your discussion section instructor or me. Do not assume the answer can be obtained from another source. General principles of academic honesty include the concept of respect for the intellectual property of others, the expectation that individual work will be submitted unless otherwise allowed by an instructor, and the obligations both to protect one's own academic work from misuse by others as well as to avoid using another's work as one's own. All students are expected to understand and abide by these principles. Please familiarize yourself with the discussion of plagiarism in SCampus in Part B, Section 11, “Behavior Violating University Standards” policy.usc.edu/scampus-part-b. Other forms of academic dishonesty are equally unacceptable. See additional information in SCampus and university policies on scientific misconduct, <http://policy.usc.edu/scientific-misconduct>. Students will be referred to the Office of Student Judicial Affairs and Community Standards for further review, should there be any suspicion of academic dishonesty. The Review process can be found at: <http://www.usc.edu/student-affairs/SJACS/>
