Course Description:

Improvisation, a main ingredient of jazz, allows the performer to create in the moment, bringing about an exciting and unpredictable adventure for the performer and listener. At the same time, this peculiarly American art form reflects and chronicles the national identity like no other.

This seminar explores the important jazz musicians and their music from the early days of Storyville to the present. During the semester we will: study the evolution and elements of jazz music by listening to music during class and on YouTube, learning musical fundamentals and formal construct, participating in group presentations, becoming familiar with an array of jazz recordings, and reading a sampling of primary and secondary source material relating to ten different jazz
